Sanitary League

OF THE

District of Columbia.

WASHINGTON, D. C.:
BYRON S. ADAMS, PRINTER,
1892.

THE Sanitary League of the District of Columbia was formed early in 1893, by a number of citizens who believed they saw a field for useful effort by an organization of citizens working in concert with the authorities to remove existing and to avert threatened dangers to the public health of the city. The scope of the organization was believed to include a general sanitary survey of the District of a character that while it might be accomplished by the co-operation of citizens, would be beyond the means placed at the disposal of the municipal officers ; to provide means of instruction in simple hygiene and sanitation, so as to remove as far as possible the ignorance that permits unsanitary conditions to exist, and contributes so much to increase the annual death rate, especially among the poor ; to diffuse information generally on sanitary matters through the medium of the press and public addresses, and to otherwise aid the proper authorities in their efforts to improve the sanitary condition of the District, and to prevent the introduction or spread of disease.

When the aims of the association were made known, many citizens willing to aid in promoting these objects sent their names to the secretary and were enrolled as members. It is believed the larger the membership, the more useful the organization will become, and for that reason all citizens interested in the work are invited to become members. Recently compiled statistics, though they make a showing not unfavorable to Washington, when compared with other cities, demonstrate that even in Washington a fearful number of lives are wasted annually through ignorance of or indifference to sanitary conditions.

It is a life-saving crusade in which the members of the League are enlisted. Their work will not be done until the number of deaths attributed to preventable causes is reduced to the minimum.

Aside from the humane principle involved the material interests of the city will be promoted in whatever degree the efforts of the League are successful ; for the accomplishment of its objects will greatly increase the attractiveness of the Capital as a place of residence.

Much has been done in 1893 towards the ends for which the League is working. A "campaign of education" has been instituted, many useful investigations have been conducted, knowledge has been diffused, and the authorities have been assisted in carrying out plans which have proved most beneficial as the reduced death rate attests.

The administration of the affairs of the League is entrusted to a council annually chosen, consisting of the general officers and representatives of different localities of the District. Members of the League are expected to give attention to the sanitary conditions of their own neighborhoods, to aid their local chairmen in the work he finds necessary, and to be ready to take part in the general work of the League, if their services are required. The officers and members of the League for 1893 are appended.
